LIVEBUDDY

ONTHEGO MY — FULL PRODUCT KNOWLEDGE BASE

Purpose

A richer merchant knowledge base for the LiveBuddy hackathon demo. It is designed so an AI assistant can retrieve product information quickly while a live host continues presenting instead of manually searching the merchant website.

Data principle

• Use the merchant's published information as the source of truth.

• Separate verified product facts from marketing claims.

• Never invent missing price, stock, flavour, size, ingredient or promotion information.

• For changing information such as price, stock and promotions, refresh the merchant database before the live session.

• For health, medical or individualized questions, LiveBuddy should not improvise; it should stay within published product information or advise the host to verify with an appropriate professional.

Recommended architecture

Viewer question → intent detection → product retrieval → answer generation → host display / voice response

• Product retrieval should prioritize exact product names, aliases and categories.

• Price questions should use the latest catalogue record.

• Comparison questions should retrieve multiple records before generating the answer.

• Every answer should retain a source reference internally so the system can show where the answer came from.

• The assistant should have an explicit 'I don't know / needs verification' state.
